Dear Friends,

In 2017 Curative Connections committed to a process that will lead to historic and significant changes to our capacity to meet the community’s needs, both now and for decades to come. Why did we make that commitment?

- We served 7.3% more people in 2017 than in the previous year, which continues the multiyear trend of steady increases in the number of people who turn to Curative for help.
- By 2030, Brown County’s population of people age 65 and older will double.
- The number of people in Brown County with clinically diagnosed dementia is 14,500. By 2030 that number will double.
- The number of people with disabilities in Brown County is more than 26,000 and growing.

This silver tsunami will persist for decades to come, just as the number of people with disabilities will continue to climb. Curative frequently has wait lists for our services, and our capacity to meet people’s needs is hampered by our physical space at our main facility on Curry Lane in Green Bay.

For these reasons and more, we spent much of 2017 studying how best to respond to the challenges these demographic changes pose—the gap between our current capacity to meet the community’s needs and the reality of the increasing number of people we are serving.

Our solution to this challenge is emerging—you will hear more about it in 2018.

For now, we hope you will enjoy reading about Curative’s service highlights and accomplishments in 2017. Among the many notable facts was that our Brown County-wide transportation services for older adults and people with disabilities provided 63,299 distinct trips and traveled nearly 550,000 miles, literally to the moon and back. That is a remarkable feat made possible by the 105 volunteer drivers who devote tens of thousands of hours transporting our most vulnerable friends and neighbors.

Also noteworthy is our collaboration with several organizations, including CP and ASPIRO, Bellin Health and other health systems, long-term managed care organizations for people with disabilities and older adults, and others. Together we are working to improve our clients’ health outcomes and their experience with these systems while simultaneously reducing overall costs.

Curative’s mission of helping people achieve their goals for independence is strengthened by these kinds of collaborations.

Our efforts are also bolstered by our service funders, including our county, state and federal government partners; businesses and organizations; United Ways and churches; and our dedicated volunteers and generous individual donors.

Curative Connections’ committed and compassionate staff bring our mission to life every day. They create the kind of nurturing, supportive and caring environment for which Curative is known.

Finally, we are grateful to Curative Connections’ volunteer board of directors. Their generosity of time, knowledge, and resources strengthen our capacity to serve. On their behalf, as well as Curative Connections’ staff, we hope you will enjoy this 2017 annual report.

Sincerely,
Mark Radtke  Chairperson of the Board

In 1996 a young man with a great deal of promise sustained a severe brain injury after being attacked by a group of adolescents. Curtis was 14 years old at the time and a freshman in high school. Besides being academically strong, Curtis was also active in sports and was the quarterback for his freshman football team.

As a result of the beating, Curtis spent the next three months in a coma. After awakening he began the long and difficult process of rehabilitation.

It was in 2003 that Curtis came to Curative Connections, where four days a week staff in our Brain Rehabilitation and Wellness program help him with the long process of neurological rehabilitation. Curtis works hard to continue to improve his memory, reading comprehension and speaking and writing skills.

On Fridays Curtis attends another Curative Connections program —Ready, Set, Life!—to develop independent living skills and prepare himself for employment. That is his ultimate goal: to obtain a permanent job in the community.

Curtis is well known for his mental toughness, his sense of humor and big heart, and his positive, can-do attitude. Susan Johnson, coordinator of Curative’s Brain Rehabilitation and Wellness services, notes that “Curtis deals with many obstacles on a daily basis, but his persistence and determination enable him to keep working hard and making progress.”

If you ask Curtis what he likes most about Curative, he will give you a big smile and say, “Everything. I love the people here. It’s like heaven on earth.”

Kenny has a strong desire to learn and has overcome many barriers, despite some cognitive challenges. Growing up, Kenny lived in Texas with his mother and eventually a group home as he got older. Like any young adult, his goals these days is to live on his own, and that desire has only intensified now that he lives in Wisconsin.

Curative Connections supports Kenny’s goals and helps him make progress to achieve them. Today Kenny lives independently in an apartment with just a little help from his Curative Connections friends. He was certainly motivated since moving from his group home to Wisconsin. He cleans his apartment himself, cooks and does laundry all on his own. He’s worked hard to learn how to do all of these things, increasing his self-confidence.

Another where Kenny has grown in confidence is speaking and reaching out to make new friendships. In the last year, he has made new friends through his participation in a Special Olympics bowling league, a watershed moment for Kenny.

Kenny continues to grow his abilities in a variety of areas, such as reading, how to tell time, and keeping track of appointments. At a temporary job that Kenny worked at, he received high marks from his supervisors and coworkers for his strong desire to do well and not be late. At first he was so concerned about being on time that he arrived at his work site two hours early. Curative staff worked with Kenny to help him establish a system and routine to arrive on time but not too early.

Kenny’s active participation in Special Olympics bowling, his work, new friends, and his growing independence are rewarding to see.

To top it off, Kenny’s bowling score has improved by an average of 20 points over the past year!

Colette was at Curative Connections three or four times a week, which helped me as I recuperated from heart surgery. Unfortunately, Coke also suffered a health setback and was transitioned to another adult day program at Curative, this one for people with more advanced stages of dementia. Again, Coke instantly blended in with the staff and other program participants.

These days Coke has become more difficult to care for, but the team does a great job to meet her increased needs. In addition, we use Curative’s in home services team three mornings a week to help get Coke ready for her time in Curative’s adult day program.

Curative has allowed Coke to maintain her greatest wish, and that is to remain at home as long as possible. They help care for her so I have time to take care of myself. When I am with Coke I can really be with her. It’s hard to truly measure the impact that Curative Connections has had on our lives, but I know I could not do it without them. I am so proud to tell everyone that Curative is right by my side, as Coke and I deal with the biggest challenge of our lives, Alzheimer’s disease.

I met my wife, Colette, or “Coke” as people affectionately call her, when we were both teaching and coaching for rival high schools in Green Bay. We got married and had the perfect life together, as well as fulfilling careers. But then, after a 34-year career in teaching, coaching, and serving as Director of Athletics at Preble High School, Coke retired in 2005 only to face a new challenge: Alzheimer’s disease, diagnosed in 2008.

Coke wanted to remain at home so we looked for possible help and found Curative Connections. Our lives changed forever when Coke started attending one of Curative’s adult day programs, this one designed especially for people with dementia. Coke was a bit nervous at first, but the warm and caring staff made her feel welcome and valued. She made new friends in the program quickly and enjoyed the myriad of activities the program provided, especially painting.

Jennifer's Curative Connections journey began in 2007. After she graduated from Green Bay's Southwest High School, she joined Curative's sheltered workshop program where she worked for the next 10 years.

It was during 2017 that she became one of the very first people to participate in a Curative Connections program that trains people with disabilities for work not within Curative's walls but with employers elsewhere in the community.

The program provides hands-on training and general work-skills development, which has served Jennifer well. Besides these experiences, Jennifer has volunteered at Paul’s Pantry, the Humane Society, Goodwill and the ADRC’s Grounded Café. All these Curative services helped teach Jennifer the necessary skills she needs to become more social and independent.

Jennifer’s parents were told early on that Jennifer would never be able to work in the community or be capable of living on her own. To her parents’ joy, she has proven the naysayers wrong. Jennifer not only gained life skills through Curative’s programs, but she developed pride in herself and her accomplishments. She now lives in her own apartment, works in the community at Culver’s, is active in the Special Olympics, and is a cheerleader in the tri-county gymnastics.

Jennifer was the recipient of the David Hall Award at Curative's 2018 Annual Recognition Banquet. This is an award given to an individual who has gone above and beyond to overcome challenges and gain new strengths.

Jennifer’s mother Nancy said, “I cannot imagine what Jennifer’s world would be like today if it were not for the team at Curative. They listened to us and were always positive. It was the right move for her and we are forever grateful.”
